OUR MISSION

LandWatch plays a vital role in achieving a responsible, balanced approach to planning for and conserving Central Oregon's land and water resources, while recognizing the needs of future generations. We work to protect and conserve the region's ecosystems and wildlife habitats, to foster thriving, sustainable communities and to spread the costs and benefits of growth equitably across the community as a whole.

OUR STAFF

Paul Dewey, Executive Director.

A long-time Central Oregon resident, Paul founded Central Oregon LandWatch and has been active in the organization since its inception in 1986.

Paul received his law degree from the University of Virginia, and has practiced law for 30 years specializing in land use, environmental, and Native American law. He is admitted to practice in Oregon, the Federal District Court of Oregon, the Ninth Circuit, the Federal Court of Claims and the Federal Circuit, and has experience with cases involving the Clean Water Act, the Endangered Species Act, NFMA and NEPA, and Oregon land use laws. He has worked for two Oregon governors reviewing roadless areas in the state and was on Governor

OUR BOARD

Adam Albright is a former private venture capitalist with a wide range of business involvements in the United States and abroad with active interests in sculpture, design, architecture and agriculture.

He has extensive non-profit board experience which includes serving as the Vice Chair and Chair of the Development Committee for the Natural Resource Defense Council from 1985-2015, as well as serving as the Chair of the Communications and Programs Committees for Conservation International from 1993-1998, among other board service. Adam lives in Bend with his wife, Rachel, and enjoys yoga, xc skiing, hiking and paddleboarding.

Karen Lillebo is a retired research chemist formerly at Bend Research, Inc. located in Bend, Oregon. She has lived in Central Oregon since 1984, has been a member of Central Oregon LandWatch since 1986, and a board member for the past ten years. Ms. Lillebo is a longtime environmental advocate and a member of Oregon Wild and the Oregon Natural Desert Association.

Jeff Perreault is a retired USGS hydrologist. He received his undergraduate degree from the University of Oregon, and his M.S. in hydrology from the University of Hawaii. Although his work took him throughout the Pacific Basin, he's called Bend home for over 20 years. Holistic water issues have been his profession and his passion; they are what originally brought him to LandWatch and keep him busy now. He continues to study and educate others about Central Oregon's unique hydrogeology.

Amy Stuart received her B.S. from Cornell University and her M.S. in Wildlife Sciences and Management from Colorado State University. She recently retired from the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife after 30 years of public service. Most of her work was as a fish biologist. Her experiences range from ocean salmon manager on the coast, to fish habitat biologist in the John Day and Crooked River basins, to hydro project biologist east of the Cascades, and most recently as the Deschutes Basin manager. Amy loves the outdoors and cares about protecting and conserving our incredible resources in central Oregon. She also enjoys a variety of recreation such as fishing, hunting, hiking, kayaking, well... almost everything outside. She currently serves as the board president.
